How did you tell family you couldn't lend them money again?

My brother asked again last week. It's the third time in two years. The first two times I lent it, it wasn't repaid, and I said nothing.

This time I said no, badly: I over-explained, apologised four times, and then lent half anyway because he cried. How have you actually said it, in words, without it turning into a fight? Especially when the no has to hold for next time.

Decide the number before the call, not during. Mine is zero for loans and a small amount I'll give and never expect back. A gift I can afford stopped the guilt, because I wasn't refusing him. I was choosing what I give.

Update, Sunday: I used Valeria's sentence almost word for word. He was quiet, then said okay. I cried in the car afterwards. Thank you both.
