Tres direcciones visuales para el Círculo de la beta

This is a visual exploration of the Circle that exists today, nothing more. The behaviour, information architecture and actions stay exactly as they are. The beta has one shared Spanish-speaking Circle with 11 women. Each direction shows the same four screens: the Circles home, the shared Circle with reflections, the composer and the report sheet with its safety path.

What stays fixed

- Every interface string is Spanish copy from the repo (`es/circle.ts`, `es/rooms.ts`, `es/common.ts`), unchanged.
- Existing actions only: Añade tu frase, Escribe tu respuesta, Leer sus respuestas primero, Esto se quedó conmigo, Responder, the … menu, Enviar tu respuesta, Reportar, Bloquear a esta persona, Pedir ayuda ahora.
- No seats, matching, seasons, start dates, recaps or room-health rules anywhere on these screens.

Anonymity

- First names only, with a monogram where the app shows a portrait. No surnames, photos, places or path details.
- The report sheet keeps the repo's own line: Nadie sabe quién reportó.
- The room's name, the 11 first names and the reflection texts are example content, marked texto de ejemplo in each mockup.

Safety in every direction

- A Seguridad y ayuda control in every room header, plus the existing note Los círculos no se supervisan de noche.
- The report sheet shows the self-harm path with Pedir ayuda ahora above the send button.
- The 24-hour review promise in the guidelines (se revisa en 24 horas) is not shown. It stays unverified until the staffed alert drill passes.

1 · Quiet Table

Ivory paper, soft ink, note cards around a shared table. Private, gentle and communal.

2 · The Reading Room

Olive, tobacco, cream and charcoal: an editorial literary salon. Intelligent and intimate.

3 · Pinned Letters

Elara's correspondence brought into the Circle: letters, folds, postmarks. Modern and calm.

Quiet Table

Eleven women around one table at the end of the day. Nothing shouts. Each reflection is a small note set down on linen, close enough to read and far enough to stay private.

TYPE

¿Qué notaste?

Literata, regular weight only. A book face at reading size, so questions and reflections read like handwriting set in type.

Esto se quedó conmigo · Responder

Public Sans for controls and meta: plain and quiet, never bold.

MATERIALS

Ivory paper, linen note cards with a soft cast shadow, and a hand-drawn oval rule standing for the table.

CARD TREATMENT

Small 4px corners. Reflections tilt slightly, within ±0.6°, as if set down by hand. Your own note is set apart with sage, not with a frame.

HIERARCHY

The question sits in the middle of the table. Names circle it as monograms. Actions are sage text links rather than buttons.

SAFETY

A low, soft panel at the foot of the room, written as the room speaking, with one sage link. Always visible, never alarming.

FEELING

Private, gentle, communal. The closest to today's "Sobre la mesa" language.

Inicio de Círculos

The question sits in the middle of an oval table, with the women who answered gathered around it by first initial. One clear action.

Círculo con reflexiones

Notes set down on the table at a slight angle. Actions are quiet sage links. The ♡ in the header is Seguridad y ayuda, and the night note stays at the foot of the room.

Compositor

A ruled linen note to write on. The audience line sits right above the send button, with the room's monograms beside it.

Reporte y seguridad

The sheet uses the same ivory as the room, so reporting feels like part of the room's care, not an alarm. The danger path is a soft sage panel above the send button.

DIRECCIÓN 2

The Reading Room

An evening salon in a room of books. The question is set like the epigraph of an essay, and the reflections are numbered marginalia from women who read closely. Adult, literary, warm, and not expensive.

TYPE

¿Qué notaste?

Cormorant Garamond for the masthead and questions: high contrast, used large and sparingly.

Me detuve frente a la caja...

Source Serif 4 for reflections. IBM Plex Sans in small caps for labels and actions, like an index.

MATERIALS

Uncoated book stock, a double rule like a printed page, and an olive cloth band for the masthead.

CARD TREATMENT

No cards. Reflections are typeset entries separated by hairlines, numbered in tobacco, and the first one opens with a drop cap. Your own entry carries a tobacco margin rule.

HIERARCHY

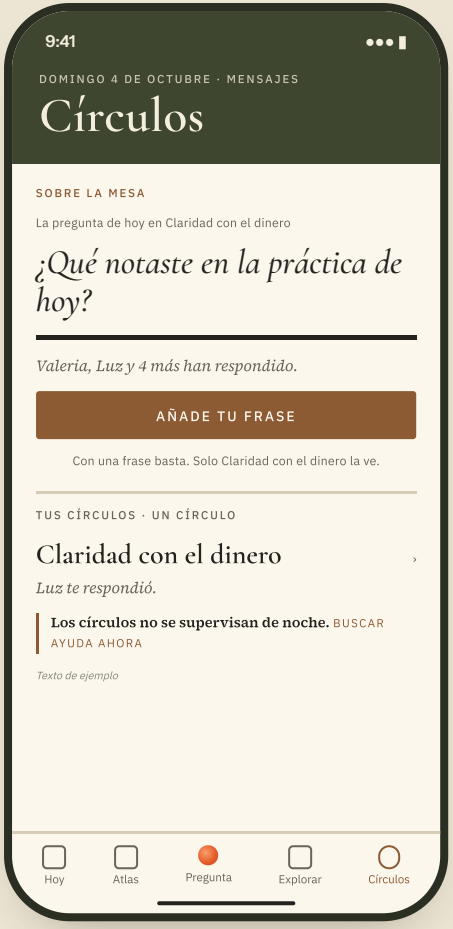

Masthead, then the question as an epigraph, then the entries. Actions are small capitals, set like an index.

SAFETY

A boxed notice with a margin rule, set like a footnote you can't miss. Help is a clear outlined button.

FEELING

Intelligent and intimate. Square edges and a single accent keep it away from luxury branding, and away from wellness pastels.

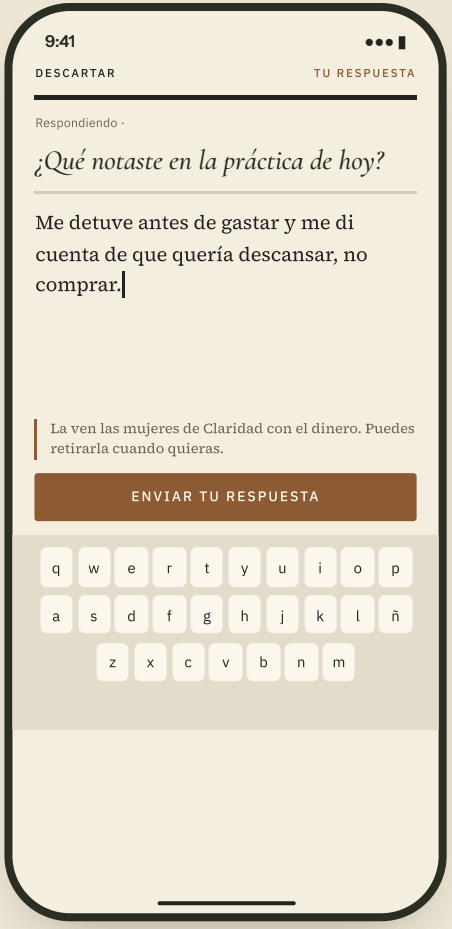

Inicio de Círculos

An olive cloth masthead. The question is set as an italic epigraph, with the names in italic below a double rule. Safety is a margin note.

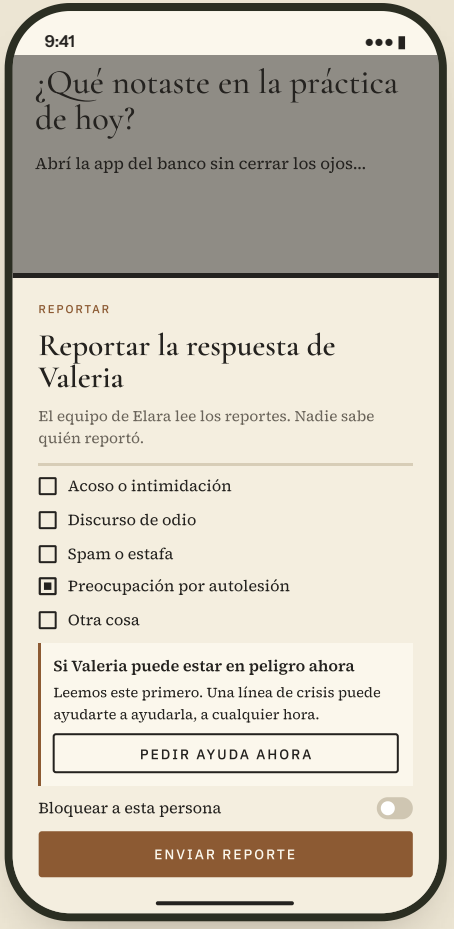

Círculo con reflexiones

No cards: numbered entries in small roman numerals, divided by hairlines. Seguridad y ayuda is spelled out as a framed label in the header.

Compositor

A blank cream page under the question set as a heading. The audience line is a tobacco margin note, like an editor's.

Reporte y seguridad

A cream sheet under a double rule. The danger path is a boxed note with a tobacco margin rule and its own outlined button, ranked just above sending.

Pinned Letters

Elara already writes to each woman by letter. In the Circle that language becomes shared: the question arrives as a stamped letter to the whole room, and each reflection is a short reply addressed to las mujeres de the room. Modern stationery: white sheets, one fold, a postmark. Nothing glued and no collage.

TYPE

¿Qué notaste?

Fraunces, Elara's own face, for letters, carrying the brand's voice into the room.

PARA · LAS MUJERES DE CLARIDAD

IBM Plex Mono for postmarks and address lines. Instrument Sans for controls.

MATERIALS

White stationery on a warm desk grey, with one fold line, one folded corner, a dashed stamp edge and a postmark ring.

CARD TREATMENT

Letters have square corners and a crisp shadow. Only the question letter is stamped and only your reply has a folded corner, so each material means one thing.

HIERARCHY

Every piece is addressed. The “Para” line puts the audience first, before a word is written.

SAFETY

A plain slip clipped under the letters: the same paper, quieter in tone, with a clear forest button for help.

FEELING

Calm, considered, personal. Continuous with Elara's letters, the most “Elara” of the three.

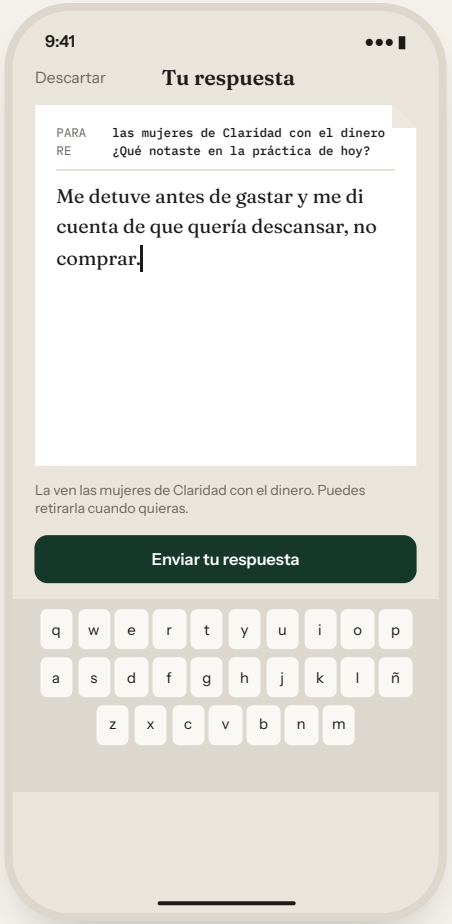

Inicio de Círculos

The question arrives as a stamped, folded letter signed by Elara. Below it, the room is one letter in the drawer and safety is a slip.

Círculo con reflexiones

Each reflection is a short letter with a De / Para line, so its audience is part of the page. The postmark dates the question, and safety is a labelled pill.

Compositor

The reply is addressed before it's written: Para · las mujeres de… heads the sheet. Your own letter is the only one with a folded corner.

Reporte y seguridad

A plain white sheet with no stamps or postmarks: the stationery steps back when something is wrong. Help is the forest button, and sending is quieter ink.

For an 11-woman beta: Quiet Table, with the letter's address line

	1 · QUIET TABLE	2 · THE READING ROOM	3 · PINNED LETTERS
Colour	Ivory, soft ink, sage; clay once	Deep olive, tobacco, cream, charcoal	White sheets on desk grey; postmark red; Elara forest
Type	Literata, regular only; Public Sans	Cormorant Garamond; Source Serif 4; Plex Sans small caps	Fraunces; IBM Plex Mono; Instrument Sans
Materials and cards	Linen notes, slight tilt, soft shadow, an oval table rule	No cards: typeset entries, hairlines, drop cap, double rules	Square letters, one fold, a stamp, a postmark, a folded corner for yours
Hierarchy	The question in the middle, names around it	Masthead, then epigraph, then numbered entries	Addressed pieces, with the audience first (De / Para)
Safety presence	Soft panel in the room's voice	Boxed footnote, outlined help button	Plain slip; the stationery steps back
Feeling	Private, gentle, communal	Intelligent, intimate, adult	Calm, personal, continuous with Elara
Risk	Could feel too soft for women who want substance	A dark masthead and small caps lower legibility at large text sizes; it reads as a publication rather than a room	Thirty letters a week can feel like an inbox; every new item needs addressing

STRONGEST FOR THE BETA

Quiet Table

With 11 women in one Spanish Circle, the room is small enough for its members to recognise each other. The table and its ring of monograms make that visible without counts. It continues the language already in the repo (Sobre la mesa, Estás al día), so no copy changes are needed. It is also the gentlest setting for a self-harm report.

BORROW FROM PINNED LETTERS

The “Para” address line

Set the existing composer note (La ven las mujeres de Claridad con el dinero. Puedes retirarla cuando quieras.) as an address line at the top of the note before writing, instead of a footnote. The audience is stated first. It's the same string with only its placement and type changed.

SMALLEST FIRST CHANGE

The reflection card as a linen note

A style-only change to the answer card: ivory fill, a soft shadow instead of a border, 4px corners, and the reflection text in a book serif. It touches only the values in `components/circles/tokens.ts` (paper, edge) and the slip's text style, with no layout, copy or behaviour change. It should be checked at 320 pt and at the largest text size before it ships.
